

The Unbroken Circle

A Toolkit for Congregations Around Illness, End of Life, and Grief

A new resource from the Duke Institute on Care at the End of Life

By James L. Brooks, M. Div.

In The Unbroken Circle, the Duke Institute on Care at the End of Life and Reverend James L. Brooks provide today's congregations with an inspiring, achievable vision for caring for people facing illness, end of life and grief.

From leadership development and education to congregational care and worship, this book guides clergy and lay leaders in weaving end of life care into the fabric of congregational life. The abundance of practical tips, examples, and resources provide congregations with tools to strengthen the way they care.

- Easy-to-use tools and templates to assess your congregations demographics and offerings, create action plans and evaluate your progress
- Step-by-step guidance for educational sessions and support groups on how to offer support during illness, end-of-life care planning and working through grief
- Specific tips for providing support in different end of life situations
- Details on hundreds of additional resources on illness, end of life and grief
